Madeleine Editions strives to deliver quality, beautiful stories at an affordable price with instant access for modern families.

We are passionate about bringing back an appreciation for the traditional arts in a format that makes sense for modern lifestyle.

We rebel against the commercialized “factory fiction” lining the store shelves.

We believe in “the danger of a single story,” and how misunderstanding and misconception are often results of upbringings with limited cultural exposure.

For the above reasons:

1. Our read-aloud narration is designed to provide easy exposure to new languages for monolingual families.
2. Our digital format is borderless, allowing multilingual families to pass on their heritage language without the cost and delay of procuring quality books from abroad.
3. Each story is a multicultural collaboration between artists of different backgrounds, often across continents.
4. Our collection takes little readers on an imaginary voyage around the world.

◆ In spring 2020, in the wake of the Covid-19 pandemic, we donated 12,000 books to homebound families around the world: U.S., France, Japan, Australia, among others.

◆ We’ve partnered up with the doctors at DonatePPE, a non-profit that procures personal protective equipment for healthcare workers, and Guy Gilchrist, beloved cartoonist, to create a book to help children cope with coronavirus fears. MONSTER DANCE is due for release in fall, 2020.
